Expertise: urban school district strategic improvement and redesign, performance-based pay and accountability

Eli Kennedy

Director

The Eli and Edythe Broad Foundation

Eli Kennedy is an expert in urban school district strategic redesign, establishing efficient and effective school district human resource operations and performance-based pay and performance accountability systems. Kennedy is a director at The Eli and Edythe Broad Foundation, a national venture philanthropy dedicated to dramatically improving K-12 urban public education through better governance, management, labor relations and competition. He manages the foundation's investments that seek to improve the ways urban school districts manage their human capital. Kennedy specializes in working with districts to improve their human resources departments, implement differentiated compensation initiatives, including pay for performance, and explore innovative solutions for placing the highest quality educators with the neediest students. Kennedy has been involved in efforts to strategically redesign school districts in Washington, D.C., Denver, and Oakland.
